New York, NY: 212.404.0653

Boris Brownstein is a skilled litigator with a track record of effectively representing clients from small businesses to Fortune 500 companies in state and federal courts. With a diverse practice spanning financial services, securities, commercial litigation and intellectual property, Boris brings a wealth of experience from his time at boutique, midsize and international law firms, as well as his in-house counsel role at a major bank.

Boris provides comprehensive legal services across a wide spectrum of practice areas. His primary focus lies in financial services and commercial disputes, where he excels in navigating commercial litigation and contract disputes, with a track record of obtaining favorable outcomes on summary judgment and at trial. In addition to his core practice, Boris regularly represents clients in intellectual property matters, real estate and business disputes.

Before joining Stradley Ronon, Boris honed his skills at New York-based and international law firms, gaining valuable experience in his practice arenas. His unique perspective is further enhanced by his previous role as in-house counsel for one of the world's largest banks, where he managed mortgage banking and real property litigation.

Boris has been repeatedly named on The Best Lawyers in America: Ones to Watch list, underscoring his reputation as a rising star in the legal community.
